ABSTRACT

This selective bibliography of books and periodicals in the United States Military Academy Library was prepared to assist those who are concerned with increasing understanding and resolving the clash of cultures, interests, and religions of the Middle East. It includes the library's holdings through the middle of 1973. The materials are categorized by general works and by individual country. Within each category they are listed alphabetically by author. "The Middle East, in geo-political terms, is something far more abstract than an oil-rich desert contested by feuding Semitic peoples. Beyond that, it is the 'gateway to the East,' 'the Hinge of NATO' and the crucial cockpit of the historic Russian drive toward warm water."

J. William Fulbright
United States Senator
Before the Senate, Washington
August 24, 1970

"I cry for a country
Which was created for beauty;
I cry for the inheritance of honor,
So difficult to attain.
I mourn for those spirits
Who restrained men
From fighting for victory.
Oh, I cry for the glory of our land,
Which became only a dream."

Khary-uddin Zurukli
Modern Arab Poet

INTRODUCTION

The Middle East impinges on the lives of each of us. It also affects the balance of power in the world. The historical clash of cultures, interests and religions, which have culminated in a series of Arab-Israeli conflicts, has been further aggravated by the problems of Palestinian refugees and guerrillas. These sources of conflict moreover, have within recent years resulted in the potential for Great Power confrontation. As of the preparation of this bibliography the OIL situation causing far-reaching global repercussions is furthering interest in the complexity of Middle East problems which seem to defy permanent resolution by bilateral, multi-lateral, including United Nations, actions.

However the necessity for bringing a heightened sense of understanding to the Middle East presupposes marshalling diverse sources of information. It is hoped that this selective bibliography of books and periodicals extant in the USMA Library will assist this task by gaining insight into this vital area; a subsequent bibliography of documentary materials will be complementary to this basic list.

The term "Middle East", applied to this bibliography, greatly exceeds the traditional concept normally associated with the territories of the Near East and their extensions into the Arabian peninsula. In a sense the Middle East also comprises the Arab-speaking countries of North Africa, more recently referred to as the "Maghreb", all of the regions of the defunct Ottoman Empire, in addition to what is sometimes referred to as the "Northern Tier", comprising Afghanistan, Iran, and Turkey, in addition to the South Asian nation of Pakistan.

Thus, geopolitically speaking, the Middle East includes the strategic areas which during World War II were under the purview of the British Unified Command in addition to the Baghdad pact nations which at that time included Iraq, the present members of CENTO (Central Treaty Organization).

"The Middle East - A USMA Library Bibliography" is a completely revised, and expanded edition of the Middle East Area Bibliography (1950), revised in 1968, and Supplements 1 (1965-67), and Supplement 2 (1967-69). It includes our holdings as of the middle of 1973. Because of its length it is being published in two parts: Books and periodicals comprise Part A to be followed by Documents, Part B. Biennial supplements are also planned.

The arrangement is alphabetically by country with reference works preceding titles which are in the circulating collections. Names of nations tend to be transitory; i.e., Egypt became the United Arab Republic and at the time of printing was the Arab Republic of Egypt; it may conceivably change again in the near future. Also the name of the Trucial Sheikdoms was changed to United Arab Emirates etc. Relevant references to them appear in the section under the Persian Gulf States. Inasmuch as the USMA Library has recently adopted the Library of Congress Classification System for its entire collections, you will still find most titles under the Dewey System, and therefore should check the card catalog before proceeding.
